What do CFP professionals really do?

CFP professionals see their clients' entire financial picture, no matter how complex and work together to build a comprehensive financial plan so their clients can live life confidently.

As a CFP professional, you will look at your clients' lives through a holistic lens, identifying their short and long-term priorities, and what influences their decisions while always putting your clients' interests ahead of your own and maintaining the highest level of integrity—also known as 3H Financial Planning™ – holistic, human and honest — an approach introduced by FP Canada.

CFP professionals are qualified to provide financial advice to the highest level of complexity in the areas of:

1. Financial management
2. Investment planning
3. Insurance and risk management
4. Tax planning
5. Retirement planning
6. Estate planning and legal aspects

Successful financial planners are trusted partners through all phases of their clients' lives. While CFP professionals must have the technical skills and financial planning knowledge, they also need strong behavioural and relationship skills to communicate and connect effectively with their clients. These skills, often referred to as 'soft skills', are increasingly critical for success. The industry acknowledges that excellent soft skills differentiate 'good' from 'great' financial planners and help build long term trusted relationships.

Key job titles for CFP professionals

1. Senior financial planner
2. Manager, financial planning
3. Director, financial planning services
4. Vice president, wealth management

“ A 'great' financial planner is someone who truly listens to their client, identifies their aspirational needs through discovery, and ultimately helps them achieve their 'life goals'—not just their 'financial goals'—but their 'life goals'. That's the difference between a 'great' and a 'good' financial planner. ”

New laws require certification

In recent years, provincial governments in Ontario and Saskatchewan have passed new laws requiring financial planners in those provinces to demonstrate their competence and professionalism by obtaining a financial planning certification. With other provinces poised to institute similar requirements in the future, FP Canada will always work to ensure that CFP certification and QAFP certification remain leaders in a fast-changing environment.

But why do you need to earn a certification?

Getting certified is important because :

- Knowledge: it confirms that you have the knowledge, skills and experience to provide holistic financial planning strategies
- Professional Responsibility: it shows commitment to the highest ethical standards and to always act in your clients' best interests
- Professional Branding: it enhances your professional and personal brand by demonstrating your value to employers and clients
- Regulatory Requirements: it ensures that you keep pace with evolving legal and regulatory requirements
- Trust: it fosters trust and helps clients feel confident about the financial planning advice they get from you

“ We quarterback all areas of your financial life, so you can live your best life with your financial assets. A lot of people conflate financial planning with having an investment advisor. Very few people look at how the interaction of different financial areas work. In the absence of that quarterback, large financial mistakes can be made.”

Keeping standards high

CFP professionals must adhere to the FP Canada Standards Council™ Standards of Professional Responsibility, including a Code of Ethics, which mandates that they place their clients' interests first. The Standards Council vigilantly enforces these standards.

How to become a CFP professional

To obtain and maintain CFP certification, candidates must follow a rigorous process to:

- Complete a comprehensive education program
- Pass a certification exam
- Demonstrate relevant work experience
- Commit to ongoing professional development
- Adhere to a strict code of ethics

You may also choose to start your financial planning career with FP Canada's QAFP™ certification and then advance to CFP certification through our bridge program coming late 2021.

A professional success story

Helping a client with multiple successful businesses plan for retirement

" My clients rely on me to simplify their lives and I find doing so extremely gratifying. One such client story that comes to mind is that of a well established, Vancouver-based small business owner who wanted to understand if it was feasible for him and his spouse to retire in under five years. Together, they owned multiple businesses and had various active and passive income sources. They had excess funds in their holding company and had accumulated a good amount of assets throughout their working lives. However, they lacked a comprehensive financial plan which could paint a clear picture of their future and retirement. Working together, I was able to map out multiple scenarios and put together a comprehensive financial plan taking into account their existing investment portfolios, insurance, tax ramifications and most importantly their goals and priorities for the future. I was able to help them properly plan so that they could meet their retirement goals and reduce the stress associated with retirement income. "
